

Kris "Fuzz" Feddersen

A legend in the sport of freestyle skiing, Fuzz is widely recognized as a pioneer in the sport. He competed in three Olympics (88,92,94) and numerous world championships and coached the 1998 U.S. Winter Olympic Aerial Ski Team to two gold medals. Fuzz tallied up over 30 visits to the podium throughout his successful career on the World Cup Circuit. He has also been featured in many commercials and Warren Miller ski films.

A native of Steamboat Springs, Colorado, Fuzz grew up in the perfect environment to become one of the world's premier skiers. A common question asked is "why the name Fuzz"? Fuzzy's answer: "I've had thick fuzzy hair all my life, especially when I was skiing and competing as a kid". Fuzz is the first one to admit that he enjoys his nickname and that it has stuck and is here to stay.

Fuzz is currently the CEO of Flying Ace Productions, Inc. A Utah based Entertainment Company specializing in Olympic and acrobatic style performances featuring the world's foremost Olympic athletes. Fuzzy's unique personality and natural exuberance make him an ideal emcee and personality for events and television. Fuzz currently resides in Park City, Utah with his wife LeeAnne, daughter Ella, and son Luke.
